ska klippas bort

The image shows a blank sheet of white paper with horizontal ruling lines. A vertical dotted line runs down the center, and two horizontal dotted lines are positioned near the top and bottom edges. This layout is designed to create three columns for writing, with the central column being narrower than the two side columns. The text 'ska klippas bort' is printed at the top of each column, indicating that the dotted lines are intended to be cut out.
